35 U.S.C. 101 reads as follows:

Whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefor, subject to the conditions and requirements of this title.

Claims 1-11 and 15-20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 101 because the claimed invention is inoperable and therefore lacking utility.

Claim 1: Claim 1 calls for software being provided to a workstation, causing the workstation to be re-configured as a server. The term "software" is broad enough to encompass any and all possible software, and the vast majority of all possible software will not cause a workstation to be re-configured to function as a server. Accordingly, the claim recites the impossible condition of having any possible software causing a workstation to be re-configured as a server, and thus is inoperable for reciting an impossible condition.

Claims 2-6: Depend on claim 1.

Claim 7: Claim 7 recites a workstation "adapted to cause" client applications to be transferred to the workstation so that the workstation is re-configured as a server. This claim is inoperable for two separate reasons: (1) The claim does not have a mandatory requirement to transfer the re-configuring application to the workstation. Lacking any transfer of applications to the workstation, the re-configuring would never take place. (2) The term "client application" is broad enough to encompass any and all possible client applications, and the vast majority of all possible client applications will not cause a workstation to be re-configured to function as a server. Accordingly, the claim recites the impossible condition of having any possible client application causing a workstation to be re-configured as a server, and thus is inoperable for reciting an impossible condition.

Claims 8-11: Depend on claim 7.

Claim 15: Claim 15 calls for a means for transferring client applications to a means for executing. This claim is inoperable for two separate reasons: (1) The claim does not have a mandatory requirement to actually transfer the re-configuring application to the means for executing. Lacking any transfer of applications to the means for executing, the re-configuring would never take place. (2) The term "client application" is broad enough to encompass any and all possible client applications, and the vast majority of all possible client applications will not cause a workstation to be re-configured to function as a server. Accordingly, the claim recites the impossible condition of having any possible client application causing a workstation to be re-configured as a server, and thus is inoperable for reciting an impossible condition.

Claim 16: Depends on claim 15.

Claim 17: The term "client application" is broad enough to encompass any and all possible client applications, and the vast majority of all possible client applications will not cause a workstation to be re-configured to function as a server. Accordingly, the claim recites the impossible condition of having any possible client application causing a workstation to be re-configured as a server, and thus is inoperable for reciting an impossible condition.

Claims 18-20: Claims 1, 7 and 17.

Remarks

Although no prior art is applied, no indications of allowable subject matter are made due to the utility issues under 35 USC 101.

Two fundamental issues exist in the record. All of the independent claims of record call for any manner of software or application to re-configure a computer to function as a server, whereas it is not possible for all forms of software to perform this function. Additionally, claims 7 and 15 do not even require that the software actually be transferred, which means that the re-configuring function would not take place even if the specific software needed to accomplish it were recited as being present.

In general, the claims should be further amended to recite the specific software needed to accomplish the re-configuration, and clarified to recite that this necessary software will be transferred to the workstation or client actually being re-configured.

Applicant's amendment necessitated the new ground(s) of rejection presented in this Office action. Accordingly, THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. See MPEP § 706.07(a). Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the date of this final action.
